

In honor of our 75th Anniversary, the Fayetteville (NC) Chapter of The Links, Incorporated — a volunteer service organization committed to advancing cultural and philanthropic impact in Fayetteville — is proud to partner with Waterkolours Fine Art Gallery to present The Curated Collection.

The story of Waterkolours Fine Art Gallery is one rooted in vision, cultural celebration, and artistic excellence.

Waterkolours Fine Art Gallery, situated in the heart of Memphis, Tennessee, was founded by Danny and Allison Jenkins. With over three decades of dedication to the arts, Danny Jenkins has created a platform for audiences to experience the profound essence and soul of fine art.

Recognizing the universal desire to see one's history and identity reflected in art, Jenkins cultivated a deep understanding of its transformative power. His passion led him to forge meaningful connections with Black artists, addressing the longstanding underrepresentation of their works in collections, galleries, and museums. This commitment inspired Jenkins to become a scholar and advocate of Black art, dedicating his career to elevating and sharing this vital cultural legacy.

Through decades of meaningful collaboration with artists, collectors, and institutions, Jenkins has cultivated a gallery that not only celebrates artistic excellence but also serves as a beacon for education, cultural stewardship, and refined collecting. Waterkolours Fine Art Gallery has strategically exhibited in premier destinations and invitation-only environments where discerning collectors, industry executives, and financial leaders gather at such locations as Martha's Vineyard, The Hamptons, Hilton Head Island, Art Basel in Miami, and a fine art exhibition at Amazon Headquarters in Seattle. The gallery has also collaborated with distinguished figures across entertainment and professional sports, including Beyoncé and Jay-Z in association with the film Black Is King, John Legend for two album cover projects, Lenny Kravitz for the video TK421, and Dak Prescott of the Dallas Cowboys, among many others.

As a multigenerational gallery, Waterkolours represents artists across disciplines, time periods, and mediums, offering a carefully curated selection that bridges historical significance and contemporary relevance. Its roster includes internationally recognized, museum-collected artists such as Elizabeth Catlett, Jacob Lawrence, Richard Mayhew, Charly Palmer, Woodrow Nash, Phyllis Stephens, Wosene Kosrof, Manuelita Brown, and Paul Goodnight, among others. Today, Waterkolours Fine Art Gallery stands as a testament to visionary leadership and cultural impact recognized as one of the South's most respected destinations for serious collectors, corporate partners, and patrons of fine art.
